

The following is a statement from the Emissions Control Technology Association (ECTA) -- the leading representative of emission control technology manufacturers -- in response to President Obama's nomination of Gina McCarthy to be Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Washington, DC, March 4, 2013 – "We are pleased that the President has selected Gina to lead the Agency as it tackles many regulatory challenges, including the finalization of Tier 3. Gina has worked closely with the emission control technology industry in her current role at the EPA and we look forward to continuing that collaborative relationship. ECTA encourages the Senate to move quickly on her confirmation," said Tim Regan, President of ECTA.
